Flexner, The Great, Reformed Medical Education 50 Years Ago; Got Fortunes For Changes; Brought Einstein To Princeton

Dr. Abraham Flexner, aged ninety-two years, who reformed medical education in America nearly a half century ago and founded the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton in 1930, died at his home in the Washington suburb, of Falls Church, Virginia, after a brief illness. A titan of American education, Dr. Flexner combined rare vision with organizational genius to become the nation's most relentless critic of sloppy education as well as one of the most effective builders of better programs.

An extraordinary fund-raiser in his crusade to have the shoddy replaced by the best in education, says the New York Herald Tribune, he persuaded the Rockefeller family to give $50,000,000 between 1917 and 1927 to help rebuild the rickety medical education structure which Dr. Flexner largely demolished with his ranking exposures, starting in 1910.

His activity influenced all levels of the educational system and he spared neither criticism nor assistance. His career fell into three principal phases, of which the first was his exposure of medical education. His next crusade was against the big universities which had become, he said, "degree factories" — Harvard, Columbia, the Universities of Chicago and Wisconsin, and some others.

Believing in education in the broadest sense of the word as distinguished from vocational training, he denounced what he called the "chain store" system of education in the big universities.

Finally, he founded the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton with assistance of $8,000,000 in funds from the family of Louis Brandeis, the merchant, and he got the institute off to an illustrious start by persuading Dr. Albert Einstein to come there in 1933. Dr. Flexner served as first director of the now world-famous institution, retiring in 1939.

Dr. Flexner was born in Louisville, on November 13, 1866, the son of Morris and Esther Flexner, shopkeeper immigrants from Austria. He was one of nine children, who included seven sons, says the New York Herald Tribune. He attended public schools in Louisville and then, obsessed with education from the start, at considerable sacrifice to the family, went to Johns Hopkins University, where he received his degree in 1886 after two years of study.

He taught in public and private schools in Louisville, founding a prosperous preparatory school of his own, and abandoning traditional educational methods for the new progressive approach. In 1906 he obtained his master's degree at Harvard, after first studying at German universities, and he wrote a book, "The American College," which helped to launch him on his crusading career.

In 1908, this book attracted the attention of Henry S. Pritchett, head of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, who persuaded young Flexner to make a study of American medical education.

The Flexner report in 1910 stunned American educators and the public with fearless revelations of shocking inadequacies and even downright charlatanism in the medical schools of the country. Only thirty-one of the country's 150-odd medical education institutions had acceptable standards, he found. The result was a wholesale, voluntary closing up of the sub-standard medical schools.

Transferring to a post with the General Education Board, he began to draft a plan to build a better system of medical education in the country. This was completed by 1919 when he laid before the board proposals to develop model medical training centers at universities in key cities, says the New York Herald Tribune. These were to serve as yardsticks for other medical colleges to copy.

This was the plan which the Rockefellers undertook to help finance, and soon afterwards Dr. Flexner bent his energies toward discreetly inducing other wealthy families to provide millions of dollars more over the years to carry the program ever forward.

His idea for the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton was derived partly from his observation of the system in effect at Oxford, where he lectured at All Souls College in 1928; and partly from his earlier experiences in the German universities. He became imbued with the idea of a small center in the U.S. where eminent scholars could study and do research free from teaching and other duties.

When the Hamberger funds made possible the establishment of the center, Dr. Flexner set about recruiting scholars for the institute. He met Dr. Einstein at the California Institute of Technology in 1932 and found the scientist greatly interested in the advanced study project. They made a date to meet in Oxford in future months, but, in the meantime, Dr. Einstein invited Dr. Flexner to his summer home near Potsdam.

There Dr. Flexner persuaded the great scientist who had already attacked Nazism, to join the institute. Dr. Einstein said he wanted $3,000 a year salary because he doubted if he could live on less, says the New York Herald Tribune, but Dr. Flexner upped the amount to $10,000 a year and there it remained until Dr. Einstein's death.

Dr. Flexner was married in 1898 to a young Vassar graduate from Georgetown, Ky., Miss Anne Lesiere Crawford, who was to become famous in her own right for her dramatization of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." This took Broadway by storm in 1903. She also wrote other plays as well as books. She died in 1955.

In his retirement, Dr. Flexner remained active, adding several new volumes to a half dozen other books he had written, including his own autobiography, "I Remember." When he was eighty years old and beamed with honors he enrolled as a student at Columbia University, taking during the next two years several courses in the history of art under Prof. Edward M. Uppjohn, and others on the literature of American History by Prof. Allan Nevins, and one on Chaucer and the Literature of the Middle Ages.

He said that education was "the best thing in the world for a retired man," and Prof. Uppjohn observed that having Dr. Flexner in class as a student made him feel like he imagined "a horse felt with a burr under the saddle," says the New York Herald Tribune. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Jean Lewinson, of Arlington, Va.; and Miss Eleanor Flexner, of Northampton, Mass.

Urges Soviet Invite Mission To Survey Jewish Life

Dr. Joachim Prinz, national president of the American Jewish Congress, proposed in New York at a press conference in Stephen Wise Congress House, that a representative committee of U.S. Jewish leaders be officially invited to visit Soviet Russia for a study of Jewish life in the U.S.S.R. Dr. Prinz listed three purposes which a study mission on Jewish life in the U.S.S.R. would serve:

1) To ascertain the facts and figures concerning facilities for religious worship and for cultural and secular activities among Russia's Jews essential to their survival as a national minority.

2) To inaugurate friendly and on-going relationships with Soviet Jewish personalities, thus bringing the Russian Jewish community out of its present isolation and furnishing an example of the kind of "person-to-person" contact between the Russian and American peoples that both President Eisenhower and Premier Khrushchev have said is essential to the lessening of cold war tensions between the two countries.

3) To recommend ways and means for enhancing Jewish religious and cultural life in the U.S.S.R. consistent with the Soviet Constitution and the prevailing practices in Soviet society.

"We are not interested in recriminations or denunciations and we have no desire to exacerbate the Cold War," Dr. Prinz declared. "But we are legitimately concerned at least the second largest Jewish community of the world disintegrated through lack of facilities, means of expression and contacts with fellow Jews in other parts of the world."

Dr. Prinz said that Jewish people exist not only as a religious community but as a cultural and ethnic group as well. The American Jewish Congress leader said statements by Soviet Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan and Frol Koslov during their visits to the United States indicated the view that Russia's Jews constitute a religious sect and nothing more. This attitude among high Soviet officials is underlined, Dr. Prinz said, by the fact that while officially the Jews of Russia are classified as a separate nationality,

Court Orders Berlin Estate Houses Bought By Nations Back To Jews

The Supreme International Restitution Court in Berlin has recognized the claims of four Jewish families for the return of valuable estates and houses sold to foreign diplomatic agencies during the Nazi era.

The tribunal, the highest restitution court for West Berlin and West Germany, ruled that Japan, Bulgaria, Hungary, and Latvia, which is now part of the Soviet Union, must restore to the former Jewish proprietors houses bought by those countries for the use of their diplomatic representatives in Berlin between 1935 and 1939, reports the New York Times. The court said the property was to be returned to the former owners because they had been forced to sell for fear of racial persecution under the Hitler regime.

At the same time the tribunal rejected claims by the four countries involved that the property was "extraterritorial" and protected by "diplomatic immunity."

The buildings, all of them situated in West Berlin at the edge of the Tiergarten in what was formerly one of the most fashionable residential areas, were damaged and bombed during World War II. They have not been in use since 1945.

The court said the villa bought by Japan for her wartime naval attaché was to be restored to the heirs of the former owner, Hermann Cassirer, who died in Wales in 1943. They were identified as Dr. Kurt Cassirer, of Wetherby, Leeds, England, and Mrs. Edith Geheeb, of Golden, Switzerland.

The house which was bought in 1937 by Hungary as her embassy building is to be returned to Mrs. Edith Bennet, of 1820 Thirty-fifth Street, Washington, D.C., and Alexander Ball, of the Hotel Dorset, 30 West Fifty-fourth Street, New York, the court said. The Bulgarian estate is to go to Martin Tietz, of Havana, and Mrs. Eliese Zwilling, of Amsterdam, the Netherlands. The house used by Latvia is to return to its former owner, Mrs. Joseph Weinmann, of the Berkshire Hotel, Fifty-second street, New York.

In the court proceedings, Latvia, which was overrun by the Russians in 1940, was represented by the Latvian government-in-exile in London. Hungary and Bulgaria, which as Kingdoms had bought the houses, were represented by the two nations' present Communist governments.

The restitution tribunal, established by West Germany, France, Britain and the United States, works under the chairmanship of its supreme judge, Thorsten Bahr, a Swedish jurist. The court is composed of three German judges and one British, one American, and one French judge.

Defense Ministry, and one of the architects of Israel's alliance with France.

Barring a total upset, election of these new figures was assured. Mr. Ben Gurion headed the Mafal list, which also gave "safe" spots to such veterans as Foreign Minister Golda Meir, Finance Minister Levi Eshkol, and former Premier Moshe Sharet.

States were submitted by six new groups seeking to appeal to immigrants and old-time settlers from the Afro-Asian world, who total one-half of Israel's population. In addition, most of the old parties gave relatively high positions on their lists to representatives of the so-called Oriental sector.

Mapai's principal rival in the campaign is generally expected to be the Herut, a strongly nationalist party which had the second biggest delegation in the last Knesset. The Herut is headed by Menachem Beigin, who led the Irgun Zvai Leumi underground in the years before Israeli statehood, says the New York Herald Tribune. Eligible voters total 1,179,000, or 122,000 more than in the last election.

Israel To Vote For Knesset Members November 3

Twenty-six parties will seek to elect members of the 120-man Knesset (Parliament) in the November 3 national balloting, in Israel, in the first Parliamentary election in four years. This was disclosed with the expiration of the deadline for submission of lists of candidates to the Central Election Committee.

The candidates are from all active parties which at the last Knesset and a wide variety of other groups, including parties hoping to appeal to immigrants from the Afro-Asian world, says the New York Herald Tribune. Several of the new lists, in the view of most observers, have virtually no chance of electing a single Knesset member.

Observers scanned nominations of the major parties to see which candidates were given "safe" positions high on the lists. Israel uses the proportional representation system under which the voter casts his ballot not for individual candidates but for a single party list. Since the percentage of the total vote won by each party determines its number of seats, candidates high on each party list have the best chances of success.

Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's Mafal (Labor) party, which has dominated the political scene in Israel ever since statehood, gave "safe" positions on its list to three young personalities running for political office for the first time: Moshe Dayan, former Army Chief of Staff who directed the Sinai campaign against the Arabs; Abba Eban, former Ambassador to Washington; and Shimon Peres, former director general of the

A Visit To The Soviet Union

BY ZENA HARMAN

Editor's note: Mrs. Harman was the director of the International Division of the Israeli Ministry of Foreign Affairs; a member of the Israeli delegation to the United Nations; and still represents Israel on the executive board of the United Nations International Emergency Fund for Children (UNICEF). She is the wife of the new Israeli Ambassador to the United States.

I visited the Soviet Union at the invitation of the representative of the USSR to the UN Commission on the Status of Women, in September, 1956. This commission comprises eighteen States elected by the Economic and Social Council. Unfortunately, the majority of countries represented on the commission decided not to avail themselves of the invitation, primarily for political reasons. It is perhaps shortsighted to reject an invitation which has as its objective to enable observation at first hand. Israel is particularly aware of the importance of not submitting to this kind of prejudice.

Also invited were representatives of the large international non-government organizations with consultative status with the ECO-SOC. Some, but no means all, of these organizations were, in fact, represented. In addition, there were representatives of national women's organizations from countries in which the Soviet Union is especially interested, from the Middle East, Asia, and Africa primarily, as well as representatives mostly of leftist or progressive organizations from European countries.

We were received with much warmth and hospitality. A social committee had been established to be responsible for our reception and to which were attached leading women in public life in Moscow. We were accommodated in a magnificent modern hotel, well and lavishly furnished with every comfort and facility. It was an international hotel and presumably occupied only by foreign visitors and specially selected Soviet citizens.

We travelled in limousines, incidentally known as ZIM, and when we left Moscow for visits in other parts of the country, we were flown to our destination in specially chartered two-engine planes. Throughout our stay we were met everywhere on arrival by crowds of women who hung bouquets of flowers at us and were obviously excited at the opportunity to receive foreign guests, which must have been a relatively new experience for them.

In the course of the two weeks spent in the Soviet Union, we were given an opportunity to meet with thousands of people, from representatives of the Supreme Soviet, district soviets, local soviets, factory workers, medical staffs, artists, teachers, school children, etc., and much of the conversation revolved around the problems of peace and war. Political discussions were by a kind of unspoken agreement avoided, but the essential need for peace and the intense suffering of war was the theme of many statements, both official and informal.

The attractive and sad-faced representative of the Leningrad Soviet, a woman who had lost most of her family in the war, spoke with passion and emotion of the specific role that women should play in ensuring the most vital interest of all, irrespective of race, creed or nationality — the maintenance of peace and the prevention of war. We were shown in the vicinity of the city something of the destruction that had been wrought in World War II.

The center of Kiev is a new modern city. The old Kiev had been reduced to a shambles. Another such holocaust with its shocking destruction and inhumanity was inconceivable. There is no reason to suspect the sincerity of these observations, which placed their emphasis on the tragedy and pain that corrodes the lives of mother and child victims of war.

That Israel is not popular in the Soviet Union is obvious. The constant repetition in the Soviet press of the Arab point of view and the Soviet assertion that we are aggressors has left its mark. The Arabs in our party were pushed to the fore and given many opportunities to meet the press and to speak on radio. A large group of Sudanese representatives was in fact the most popular of all. They were filmed, photographed, interviewed and bombarded with friendship. They were somewhat naive and unworried, and obviously deeply moved by the attention showered upon them.

A less attractive group of Syrians indulged particularly in violent anti-Israel propaganda. One wonders if the essential need for peace was linked with the equally essential need to refuse to be impressed by outbursts of violent hatred and destructive thinking. One wonders to what extent these women, who explored for peace, were able to reject the numbing influence of a constantly reiterated hostile propaganda. It is doubtful if they are even conscious of the fact that their freedom is suppressed by the denial to them of access to all the relevant facts of a situation.

They showed us everything with great pride and certain assurance that only under Soviet Communism is real concern for the welfare of the population feasible. Their knowledge of Western institutions appeared negligible and blurred by their over-all image of the aggressive, imperialist ogre, with its nefarious intentions.

Synagogues To Get Bond Awards Of Torah Pointers

A significant religious article made by Yemite silversmiths in Israel will be awarded to synagogues that achieve a high level of participation in the High Holiday campaign in behalf of Israel Bonds ushering in the Hebrew year 5720. It was announced by Adolf L. Hamburger, national High Holiday chairman for the Israel Bond Organization.

The award will be a traditional Torah pointer, known in Hebrew as "Yad", meaning "hand", which is used during the portion of the synagogue service devoted to the reading of the Torah. The Torah pointer serves to show the place where the Torah reading begins, or to follow the reading of the Torah. Most often it is held by the one who is reading from the Scroll of the Law, but sometimes it is held by a member of the congregation who stands at his side, as an aid for his reading from the Scroll.

The Torah pointer is one of the ornaments of the Torah known as "kele kodesh" or "holy utensils", which include the "rimmenim", which fit over the tops of the two rollers of the Scroll; the crown of the Torah, which is used on certain holidays in place of the "rimmenim"; and symbolizes the regal significance of the teaching of the Torah; the Torah cover or mantle; the Torah shield or breastplate; and the Torah Pointer.

These ornaments of the Torah are not only decorations handed down through the centuries, but in some instances serve as essential means for protecting the precious Scrolls of the Law. The Torah pointer is provided for the purpose of protecting the parchment and the text against being touched by the fingers.

One of the outstanding products of Jewish artisans, the Torah pointer dates from the Middle Ages. The material used in its making has almost always been silver, although wood has also been employed at times. Of the many designs that have been created, the most traditional form is somewhat widened at the upper end, with a ring for attaching a chain by which the pointer is hung onto the Torah shield. The lower end of the Torah pointer is almost invariably a representation of a small hand with an outstretched index finger in the act of pointing.

The Torah pointer which has been selected as the award to synagogues in the High Holiday campaign for Israel Bonds this year is a sterling silver pointer decorated with hand-made filigree designs by Yemite Jews in Israel who have carried on the centuries-old traditional craft of the silversmith. The Torah pointer, which is over ten inches long, will be encased in a velvet-lined case, bearing an inscription on the cover in recognition of the Israel Bond effort of the synagogue to which the Torah pointer is presented.

In recent years, High Holiday services in many synagogues have included special efforts during the Rosh Hashonah and Yom Kippur services in support of the upbuilding of Israel through State of Israel Bonds. Since the inception of the Israel Bond drive in 1951, more than $395,000,000 has been raised to strengthen the economy of the State of Israel through the expansion of industry and agriculture, the building of homes, roads, and harbors, and the discovery and exploitation of natural resources.

Birthday Party In Bat-Yam

Forty-five elderly people were sitting around tables laden with cake, fruit, and cold drinks. Straw-hatted, bearded men in shirtheaves and gray-haired ladies, dressed in youthful frocks, their heads covered with bright kerchiefs, were conversing in half a dozen tongues, and many women were knitting, embroidering, or making floor rugs. The setting was a cool plus grove surrounded by lawns and flower beds. Tunes by Franz Lehár, Kahlmann, and Strauss came over the loudspeakers. Feet tapped rhythmically, and at any moment it seemed that some couples would rise to dance. Old age seemed of no consequence.

This is a "Golden Age Club" which convenes on the premises of the Bat-Yam home for aged run by Malben-JDC, the Joint Distribution Committee welfare program in Israel for aged, ill, and handicapped new immigrants. It is one of 30 similar clubs for old folks established by local authorities throughout Israel, with the help of Malben-JDC, which receives its funds from the United Jewish Appeal. The members, about half of them residents of the home and the rest living in the vicinity, meet here twice weekly to while away the afternoon together.

A lady rises to address the meeting. She is the club's chairman, 64-year-old Rachel Benes from Bulgaria, who lives with her children in Bat-Yam, youngest looking of them all, with brunette hair and youthful, smooth face. "Friends," she said, "today we are celebrating four birthdays." The honored members sat by a special table decorated with flowers. Most of them got a small gift which was bought from the club's funds. The last Thursday of each month is set aside for a joint birthday party for all those who celebrated theirs during the month.

MARRIAGES

HELFIELD-SPEVACK

The marriage of Miss Marlene Rhoda Spevack, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. Spevack, 3010 Barclay Avenue, to Edward L. Helfield, son of Mrs. Ann Helfield, 6390 DeVinny Avenue, and the late Max Harry Helfield, took place at Adath Israel Synagogue, on Sunday, August 30, at six o'clock. Rabbi Charles Bender officiated, assisted by Cantor E. Goldberger and Reverend M. Mandelcorn. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. Attired in white peau de sole, cut with a tight-fitted bodice; a round, scalloped neckline; short sleeves; and full bouffant skirt, with brocade down the sides, she had a finger-tip veil of tulle illusion arranged with a tiered crown of seed-pearls, beads and sequins; and carried a white prayer book with white gardenias and white satin ribbon. Mrs. Leonard Frank, cousin of the bride, was matron of honour. Her gown of pale green was made with a round neckline; and a modified balloon skirt. Her small hat was of matching feathers; and she carried a cascade of pink and white carnations. Misses Rhoda Lightman, cousin of the groom, and Cynthia Helfield, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids. The former was in a gown of pale blue organza, made with a tight-fitted bodice; and full bouffant skirt; with white embroidery at the waist. The latter was in a blue organza gown, similarly made, with a large bow at the back of the waist. Their semi-cascade bouquets were of white and pink-tinted carnations and white satin streamers. Kenneth Helfield, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Dr. Bernard Weigenberg, brother-in-law of the groom; Leo Ratner, Avrum Spevack, brother of the bride; Lionel Teitelbaum, Michael Ripsman, and Jerry Solomon. Standards of white and pink gladioli arranged with greenery decorated the Synagogue and hall. Mrs. Spevack, mother of the bride, was gowned in pale blue lace, fastened with panels at the back; and her hat matched it. Mrs. Helfield, mother of the groom, wore a beige lace gown, made with drapery at the side, held by a rhinestone clasp; and a beige feathered hat. Their corsages were of pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Helfield spent their wedding trip at the Nevele Country Club, in Ellenville, N.Y., the bride travelling in an off-white linen suit. They have taken up residence at 4850 Courtrai Avenue. Here for the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. B. Borisman, of Bronx, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Norman Pedvis, of Quebec City; and Henry Goldstein, of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Most urgent among these is the field of mental health in Israel. A massive attack on the entire range of psychiatric problems is now in its initial stages. With the Ministry of Health, Malben-JDC hopes to battle these problems as successfully and effectively as in the case of TB. The crying need in this battle today is proper medical personnel specializing in the psychiatric field. A trust fund shared equally by the Ministry of Health and Malben-JDC has been set up to grant fellowships to medical personnel willing to specialize in psychiatry. With their limited budgets neither the government nor Malben could tackle such overwhelming problems separately. But jointly, the broadening of mental hygiene services becomes feasible.

In the physical and material rehabilitation of the chronic sick we have had measured success. Aliza, at our Machine Israel Hospital for Chronic Diseases, is not only a miracle of medical science but of the human will to regain her physical powers in her new life in Israel. This determination has been coupled with learning to weave so that she may be economically independent when she leaves the hospital doors. David, a handsome young bridegroom, a survivor of the concentration camps and six operations, was helped to happiness and walked out of the hospital with his bride on his arm.

For them above all, 5720 is a year bright with promise.

When a person faints he should be laid on the floor or, better still, with his head lower than his feet. Anyone who feels faint while in a sitting position should bend forward until the head touches the knees.

When it is not possible to obtain pasteurized milk in the country, raw milk can be made safe by bringing it to a temperature of 140 deg. F. and keeping it at that heat for 30 minutes. Then cool quickly.

David and Goliath

(or the first 10 years of EL AL Israel Airlines)

That's El Al on the left. Right up there today with the giant airlines. But it wasn't an easy climb!

When El Al Israel Airlines was first established in 1949, right after Independence, we never dreamed that it would become a first-line international carrier within 10 years. (Actually, the airline was originally set up because air transportation was desperately needed to bring the immigrants to Israel from the camps and places of refuge, and there was simply no one else to do the job.)

Today, El Al is a factor in air transport not only to Israel, but between New York and London, Paris, Rome as well. It may surprise you to learn that a large number of our passengers this past season were people who chose El Al to get to Europe.

Our jet-powered Britannia service has won the respect of the civil aviation world for quality of navigation, airmanship and maintenance. Especially impressive is El Al's on-time performance during 1959 — one of the highest, if not the highest, of any international airline. And El Al is rated among the highest in another important respect: the efficiency and helpfulness of its service to the passenger and travel agent.

You have to have something special to survive among the giants, let alone grow. El Al has demonstrated that it has it.

Grossinger, N. Y.

I Am The Immigrant Who

I am the immigrant who went to Jias and asked for an interpreter to go with me when it was necessary that I take a plumber's examination. Now I am the same immigrant, but I am also a better paid plumber. Thanks to the interpreter provided by the Jias, I was able to pass the test. I would never have been able to do otherwise because my knowledge of English was insufficient.

I am the immigrant who needed an apartment, furniture, beds for my family. There was only one office where I could go for the things that I needed. Now with the help of Jias, my family has a home once more. It is not fancy, but after you have lived in a Displaced Person's Camp for ten years, you think only of a home. The fancy things will come with time, if they are to come.

I am the immigrant who needed dentures. My decayed teeth didn't stop me from beginning to learn English, but they made it most difficult for me to eat. When Jias assisted me in having a set of false teeth made then I knew that it would be a good life in Canada.

I am the immigrant who was travelling to Vancouver. That's where my relatives live. I've been in seven countries in Europe, but I was worried when I had to travel across Canada. Who would help me with the customs, with the tickets; and what if I needed some pocket money? In a way I was foolish to worry, because they told me in Europe that someone from the Jias would be there to help me. They were right.

I am the immigrant who came from a country where there was never snow. It was a wonderful thing to see, a snowstorm in Canada. But it was also very cold, and like all Canadians, new ones and old ones, I needed a good winter coat. I guess I was fortunate because I got one, a brand new one, which some company had donated to Jias.

I am the immigrant who wanted to bring my family to Canada. Only one obstacle stood in our way, the money for the transportation. I went to Jias, and they, with the United Hias Service, arranged for me and my family to overcome that difficulty. Now we are re-united again.

I am the immigrant who became a Canadian citizen today. When I appeared in the citizenship court I was able to answer the questions the Judge asked me; I was able to speak English and very often I had a knowledge of French. Why is this so? Well, I had gone to the Jias Evening School for three years after I came to Canada. I would have gone more, but you know how it is — when one works and comes home very tired. Still, I don't think I would have answered the questions that the Judge asked if I hadn't had the Jias school to go to.

I am the immigrant who was placed in employment. The job does not pay such a good salary, but it is a job, and I hope that later on I will find a better one. But do you know what it means for me to have my first job in Canada? The first weeks when I was out of work — well a man begins to think of all sorts of things and becomes depressed. Now I am a Canadian worker. I have brought home my first Canadian pay.

I am the immigrant who came to Canada seven years ago. When I came I applied for my father. He and I were the only ones left in our family. All the others had been killed in the concentration camps. It was a big decision for me to come to Canada first because my father could not pass the medical examination. For seven years Jias worked on my father's case. Today I am married, have two children, and my father has finally seen his grandchildren.

I am the immigrant who met a person who had the patience and understanding to listen to my ramblings. I am a very old immigrant, a mother who saw her beautiful son killed in Europe. Yes, it happened before my very eyes. And when I would come to Jias I had to tell someone of my son. It seems that I had to tell the same stories all the time, and I wept. Can anyone blame a mother for crying? I will always remember Jias, not only for the help they gave me, but also for the time they spent listening to an old woman with sad memories.

I am the immigrant who tried to locate an uncle who I remembered by name only. I also remembered this uncle because my father would often say that he had been the smartest of all his family. You see, this uncle had immigrated to Canada in 1924.

When I went to the Jias office to ask them to locate my uncle, I told them that I wouldn't recognize him even if I passed him on the street. The person at the Jias told me that this had often happened and relatives and friends still were located and reunited. I was also told that it may take some time.

The person at Jias was right on both counts. It did take time, and my uncle was located. It is a fine feeling to be able to pick up the telephone now and start the conversation by saying, "Hello, Uncle..."

I am all of the above and because I am the immigrant who went to Jias when I was in need. This article is from Jias News, of the Jewish Immigrant Aid Services.

success is the fact that the Jewish communities of Greece and Italy have, at their own expense, translated the document for distribution in their own countries. A second pamphlet entitled Values of Judaism for the Modern Man by Rabbi Louis Jacobs, of London, is now being printed and a third pamphlet, The Meaning of Passover is in preparation.

Another need is to provide varied and interesting cultural material for the smaller communities. Whilst it is intended to organize lecture tours in different communities, and music programmes, such as the three-country tour in 1958 of the Jewish Choir of Zagreb, these methods will not fill the great void which exists over so wide an area. A scheme has therefore been initiated whereby a library of tape-recorded programmes will be created for loan to interest communities.

The first recording is a six volume History of Jewish Music, each tape lasting one hour, and suitable for six monthly programmes on the subject. High quality musical excerpts have been obtained from the BBC, Radio France and Kol Zion La'gola of Israel, ranging from the earliest known Jewish music, liturgical as well as folk, and including modern compositions and Israeli songs. A lively French text, which itself provides a great deal of Jewish historical data, is spoken by two young actors of the Comedie Francaise. The first volume has also been translated into English, and experiments are being conducted in the United Kingdom to ascertain whether there will be a public for the whole history in that language.

The second programme is a recorded Anthology of Jewish Poetry in French as for many of the communities French is a suitable language. Future plans include the recording of a complete Seder evening and songs, readings and games for the principal Festivals. Once the library is complete a list of contents will be distributed and machinery put in operation for a lending service.

Jews living in Israel do not need to ask themselves how and why they should live a Jewish life. In highly organized Jewish communities, such as the United States or Great Britain, the cohesion of Jewish life and its traditions help to establish a pattern into which the individual fits. Post-war Continental Jewry, however, faces many social problems which lead its members away from the Jewish religion and Jewish identity. The need is to create an appeal to the rising generations, as well as at the same time to retain the loyalty of older members. It is a problem to which the work of "Community Service" is making a practical contribution.

This article is from Jewish Affairs.

a newspaper and not concerned with ideological or political debate. It is entirely practical in scope. An important fact is that the material is written by actual workers throughout Western Europe. It is inevitable that a great deal of information is derived from Anglo-Jewish experience since British Jewry is now the largest community in Western Europe which did not suffer any damage to its organisational fabric during the War and has considerably developed the kind of activities required in Europe.

The magazine contains material of the following kind: the Chief Rabbi of Stockholm and Roma and Rabbi Berman, of London, have written on Role for the Rabbi, furnishing useful and valuable ideas and practical suggestions. Henry Shaw, director of Hillel House in London has written on the Jewish Student Movement in Great Britain; Levi Gertner, Educational Officer of the Zionist Federation, on the Teaching of Hebrew outside of Israel. An important article on the work of a community president was by Signor Ottolenghi, of Milan. The problem of isolated Jews has been tackled by the Grand Rabbi of the Moselle and Rabbi Dayan of Lille, including material on educating dispersed children in Holland and the Bas Rhin of France. On youth problems there have been contributions from workers in France, England, Yugoslavia, and Scandinavia. Rabbi Louis Jacobs of London and Monsieur Pougatch, director of the Centre Educatif of Paris, have written on the celebration of Festivals.

A section has been devoted to the need for communities to make careful studies of their specific problems. It is pointed out that until the make-up of a community is known, planning is difficult. Thus in one issue a complete sociological study entitled "The Jews of X" was included. This was factual material, a survey of a small Jewish community in a large industrial city of France.

One of the first findings was that the Jewish population was three times the number on the official list. It was also discovered that nearly 50% were over 45 and that the reproduction rate of the Jews was far lower than that of their neighbours. Most of the adults came from Eastern Europe in the period 1925-30 and the social structure revealed that more than 85% of the Jews deal in clothing, 16% were merchants of one kind or another, and only 5% were professional men.

The survey also went into the interesting problems of the relationship between the old and new settlers and in particular between the French born children of former immigrants and their parents. The work of the Community Centre, set up a year ago, was considered and its failure to attract the older settlers and the intellectuals. The information was not only of great importance and interest, but an effort was made to prove to communities the value of such studies, and simple directions were given for their execution.

This magazine is performing an invaluable service and the response from communal leaders and educationalists has been most encouraging, confirming the uniqueness of the publication and the practical value of its contents.

There have been other developments. The original survey established the lack of information on educational problems and especially on books available in different parts of the world. Thus work was commenced on a bibliography of books published in the last 10 years, on biblical subjects, history, Judaism, sociological and contemporary problems, literature and the arts, encyclopaedias, etc.

The Bibliography, with summary notes in French and English, contains the full information of the country of publication and price, and an introduction describing how to use the document has been written by David Patterson, Cowley Lecturer in Post-Biblical Hebrew at the University of Oxford. A similar bibliography of books on Jewish subjects in the Spanish language has been compiled.

A special effort has been made to attract intelligent middle-class young Jews. This is a very real problem in France and for that reason a pamphlet was produced entitled Pour l'équilibre de votre enfant by a well-known French educationalist and psychologist, Madam Denise Weill, indicating the psychological reasons for providing children with a Jewish education. It has met with a remarkable reception.

More than 80 leading French organisations and institutions have distributed the pamphlet over a wide area, so that the first printing of 5,000 was soon exhausted making a second printing necessary. A further indication of its ter of the stage of Jewish history, their trials and tribulations, triumphs and achievements, serving as the main burden of our chronicles. Our sense of community and bonds of group identity may have been responsible for alighting the great heroes of our past. Perhaps this attitude is also rooted in Jewish reluctance to exalt the role of the individual as against the group and its tradition. Unlike other faiths, Judaism resulted from the creative forces of the entire people. Hence no single individual or group of individuals is enshrined above others. No one great figure is indispensable in Judaism.

And yet we ought not lose sight of the great personalities who helped shape the course of Jewish history, who left the deep impact of their genius on the centuries, and who gave form and structure to our faith and culture. To help to bring this aspect of Jewish history into clearer perspective for the average adult is the goal of the first volume of the Bnai Brith great books series.

"Great Jewish Personalities in Ancient and Medieval Times," edited by Dr. Simon Novick, Bnai Brith director of adult Jewish education, treats the life and thought of a dozen great men from the time of Moses through the Vilna Gaon. The first of a five-volume series, it will appear early in November (Farrar, Straus and Cudahy). The entire kaleidoscope of 25 centuries of Jewish experience is illuminated by means of vivid portraits of prophets, scribes, sages, philosophers, poets and mystics, all of whom helped to weave the tapestry of Judaism.

The book is divided into two sections. The first begins with the classical age of Judaism and concludes with the completion of the Talmud in the fifth century of the Common Era. Over a stretch of 17 centuries, there pass in review the commanding figures of the prophetic age, the Hellenistic and Rabbinic eras, the men who gave wing to the Jewish vision.

Moses emerges against the background of modern archaeological discoveries as an authentic personality and the most creative genius in the formulation of the monotheistic view for mankind and not as a mere borrower from Egyptian of Egypt. He appears in full splendor as the historic founder of our faith and the architect of our national destiny. The scene then changes to David, the poetwarrior, who established the kingdom and made Jerusalem the political center of the new nation.

Next comes a chapter on Jeremiah,
the best known of the Hebrew prophets as a personality. His was a time of paradox: the rise and fall of the First Commonwealth, accompanied by the emergence of the Hebrew prophets who saved Judaism at its most critical juncture. It was an unprecedented historical phenomenon that the national catastrophe of Israel led not to extinction but instead to a re-surgeance of its moral grandeur.

While the genius of our people flowered in the land of Israel, the Diaspora (dispersion) at all times played a significant role. Likewise, our faith did not lead a cocoon existence, sheltered from the cultural and spiritual forces of its environment. As a lasting testimonial to the resilience of Judaism, we have the writings of Philo, of Alexandria, who preserved Jewish values in a Gentile world. He blended the Jewish and Greek traditions of thought and withal remained a loyal Jew.

The great classical era of Judaism is climaxed with the masterly compendium of the Talmud, primarily the contribution of Babylonian Jewry. Akiba, the sage and martyr, symbolizes the vast erudition that had accumulated among the learned and the growing need to arrange the legal heritage into a patterned whole. By the end of the fifth century CE, Judaism's foundations were firmly laid. The Torah, the prophetic writings, the Hellenistic literature and the Talmud had permanently established the contours of our faith. Later generations were merely to interpret, adapt, and sometimes modify the original formulations. But it was to the ideas and institutions of Akiba's period that Jews henceforth looked for guidance and inspiration.

In the hands of Harry M. Or-linsky, Mortimer J. Cohen, Erwin R. Goodenough, and Louis Finkelstein, and other distinguished scholars, these personalities come to life, brimming with vigor and vitality. The essays are written in a popular, non-technical style, and are woven together by means of historical "bridges" or introductions, written by Dr. Novick, which continue the thread of the narrative. Thus the reader is able to see the entire panorama of Jewish history—while focusing his primary attention on the great men of the past.

The second part of the volume is concerned with Jewish heroes of the Middle Ages, which for our people extended through the 18th century. The area and scope of activity now widen as the Jewish people move beyond the confines of the Oriental world. Babylonia and Spain, France and Eastern Europe provide the background for achievements in poetry, philosophy, mysticism, and other aspects of Jewish learning.

We are first introduced to Sandila Gaon, "the father of Jewish philosophy," who helped Judaism overcome the challenge of Greek philosophy in Arabic garb
as well as that of the dissident Karaitic sect. He was the first to develop intellectual tools such as dictionaries, grammars, commentaries, for the understanding of the tradition. Judaism was thus enabled to retain its meaningfulness in a dynamic cultural milieu.
In the 11th century lived the teacher Rashi, to this day studied and esteemed as the author of the finest commentary on the Bible and the Talmud. Rashi raised the function of teaching to a high level and made the Torah accessible to the masses. He thus provided the key to what might have become the sealed pages of our heritage.

At approximately the same time, the Golden Age of Spain flourished. Its poet laureate, Judah Halevi, made himself the troubador of God and Israel, and waged the polemic defense of his faith. The persistent struggle to reconcile Judaism with contemporary philosophy and to solve the conflict of religion and reason reached its apex in the works of Maimonides. This multi-faceted spiritual leader towered over all of medieval Jewry and left a deep imprint on the larger Christian and Muslim worlds as well. He established for all times the model of the authentic Jew.

But the creative pursuit of learning was often conducted in the midst of persecution, expulsion, and wandering. Thus, Don Isaac Abravanel, scholar and statesman, witnessed the many calamities that destroyed Spanish Jewry. Despite arduous tasks and perpetual fears, he continued to write Biblical commentaries and served as "fortress and shield for his people."

In East Europe, Jewry came into its own in the 18th century. Two great men, the Vilna Gaon and the Baal Shem Tov, at the opposite poles of religious experience, sought each in his own unique style, to restore balance and strength to Jewish life.

This galaxy of spiritual giants of medieval Jewry assured our survival as a people and as a faith.
Their lives and thoughts are dramatically presented by Trude
Weiss-Rosmarin, Samuel M. Blu-

Meyer Waxman. As in the first part of the volume, the historical background is filled in so that the achievements of individuals are

5720, A Year Bright With Promise Because

BY LOUIS B. HADWITZ, JOINT DISTRIBUTION COMMITTEE DIRECTOR FOR ISRAEL

A handsome, strapping cripple, 30 years of age, realized a dream and was married this past year. Young and courageous Aliza was helped to walk and soon will be walking out of one of Israel's hospitals into the sunshine of normal life. Mr. and Mrs. Ya'acov Bekler, aged 77 and 72 years, respectively, settled into their two-room apartment, citizens of Natanya municipality, after five years as residents of a Malben old-age home. A number of graduates of Israel's Seminars, recipients of Joint Distribution Committee scholarships, packed their bags for travel to the far corners of the world, answering the call of those Jews who need and want Jewish education for their children.

These are a few of the human destinies in which Malben and JDC, using funds provided by the United Jewish Appeal, have had a small share and who found a greater happiness during the year 5719.

For us, in Israel, the year 5719 has been a good year, a year of hard work, a year of satisfaction, meaningful though at times limited. It reflects the pattern of a small country where there has been a consolidation of a new state and an understanding of what yet needs to be done. It has been a year of valuable partnership with government agencies, the Jewish Agency and local authorities. In cooperation with these official and semi-official bodies we have been able to extend aid into areas needy but untouched. We have been able to extend technical assistance and financial aid to health and welfare programs administered by government and other agencies.

For example, in this past year, we have placed 500 socially-maligned cases into institutions or provided extra-mural care for them. These were men and women who due to their condition had been bogged down in immigrant transit camps (ma'abarot) for many years. This accomplishment was the outcome of a survey carried out by Malben-JDC staff in cooperation with the Jewish Agency. As a result, the Jewish Agency has asked for further similar assistance; and, municipalities as well as local councils have come to us with their problems. At the request of the Tel Aviv municipality, we have sent our medical team into its largest city hospital to determine the possibility of rehabilitating the chronically ill patients who create a serious bottleneck for their need for long-term care, thus causing a severe shortage of hospital beds. Local councils of immigrant towns in the Negev eagerly seek out our assistance, asking us to look into the needs of their aged.

Parallel to this cooperation and coordination with government and other agencies, the year 5719 saw a new agreement come into being, an agreement between Malben-JDC and the Jewish Agency which has streamlined the admission of infirm aged and the chronically ill into our institutions. As a result, we have been able to eliminate the long waiting lists for these men and women.

Today 6,200 aged receive an old age grant from a joint fund of which Malben-JDC is a partner, to help them live in the community among family and friends. At Golden Age Clubs, which have been created by the municipalities with our help, these senior citizens find friendship and even gainful employment. Healthy older people today rarely enter our institutions; as a matter of fact, more than a hundred of them have left our homes and gone back to live in the normal communities since the establishment of housing schemes, in which we have also had a major share.

Ya'acov and Rina Bekler are two who can testify to the meaning of this program. They don't speak of their past. It is a grim story of children, grandchildren, sisters and cousins wiped out by the Nazis. They have each other, and in Israel they have found a home. Their newest home is their little apartment in Natanya which was made possible by Malben-JDC and the Natanya municipality. Beside their old age monthly grant, Ya'acov, a former businessman in Rumania, is a house-painter. Rina is very skillful with the needle. She is a gem to the working mother of Israel who in hiring her as a baby sitter also gives her the family wardrobe to mend.

In the field of tuberculosis we continue to work closely with Israel's Ministry of Health. Though the disease has steadily decreased and government TB centers have been closed this past year, a comprehensive plan for prevention, detection, and treatment of tuberculosis has been drawn up. A rehabilitation unit for setting post-TB patients is active. Our share in this program has become one of indirect assistance and subvention by us, while the Ministry of Health assumes total authority. This has made it possible for funds no longer required for intensive TB care to be channeled into other fields.

Israel Bonds 100-Day Campaign To Raise $45 Million

A campaign to raise $45,000,000 in the next hundred days through the sale of State of Israel Bonds was inaugurated as a first step in a five-year plan for the greater industrialization of Israel, when over 800 delegates from the United States and Canada met in Chicago, Illinois, for a three-day conference "to assure the attainment of our goal of $75,000,000 for 1959." A cabled message from Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion of Israel, emphasized the central importance of Israel Bonds in economic development and in the absorption of new immigrants.

While the conference celebrated the passing of the $400,000,000 mark in total proceeds from Israel Bond sales during the past eight years, with a total of $400,209,300 achieved, Israel's Finance Minister, Levi Eshkol, pointed to the fact that approximately one billion dollars would be needed in the next five years to bring Israel to a higher level of industrial production and economic stability, and that a large share of this amount would have to come from Israel Bonds.

The five-year plan, Mr. Eshkol said, visualizes an average increase of ten percent per year in industrial output, as well as an increase of between 80,000 and 90,000 workers in the industrial labor force. It is planned to increase exports of goods and services from $240,000,000 in 1958 to $570,000,000 at the end of five years, so that Israel's annual trade deficit will fall from $335,000,000 to less than $200,000,000. Industrial exports alone are expected to rise from $35,000,000 to $820,000,000 per year by 1963. A great part of the $1,000,000,000 required, "Mr. Eshkol said, will come from private sources, as it does even now. The remainder has to be provided by Government, and to a great extent from the funds raised through the sale of Israel Bonds."

The conference heard Mrs. Golda Meir, Israel's Minister for Foreign Affairs, call upon the United Nations to assure that Israel's ships and cargoes have "exactly the same rights and privileges in the Suez Canal that all other states and peoples have." "Nothing less will do for Israel," Mrs. Meir declared that the United Nations "can operate only through the moral force which it can exert. That moral force can only be effective if the United Nations defends the right of all nations, large or small." She characterized the action of Egypt in preventing passage of Israeli ships and cargoes through the canal as "a clear violation of international law and the resolutions of the United Nations."

Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, vice-president of the Israel Bond Organization, outlined plans for the new effort to sell Israel Bonds for the remainder of 1959. "The first action in the accelerated drive for the sale of Israel Bonds will be the Bond effort in the synagogues during the High Holidays," he said. "More than one thousand synagogues throughout the United States and Canada will hold Israel Bond programs during the Rosh Hashanah (Jewish New Year) and Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement). We anticipate that this synagogue effort will result in the sale of approximately $10,000,000 in Israel Bonds this year. Last year, $5,800,000 was raised through the synagogue program."

Dr. Schwartz pointed out that "No major advances have occurred in Israel's economy since 1951 without the help of Israel Bonds. This is true, whether it was the building of the oil pipeline from Elath; the enlargement of Haifa Harbor; the construction of the road to S'dom; the development of Beerseba; the exploration and exploitation of the country's natural resources; the reactivation of the Potash Works at the Dead Sea; the establishment of the Timna Copper Refinery; the expansion of the Fertilizer and Chemical plant as Israel's largest single industrial enterprise; the American-Israeli Paper Mills, the construction of electric power plants; the new Rogosin rayon plant at Ashdod; the Jordan River irrigation project; the expansion of the railroad from Beerseba to Dimona; the development of the port and town of Elath and many other industrial and agricultural projects."

New Fund Helps 1,000 Displaced Jews

More than 1,000 Jews representing 350 families have received emergency aid in the past six months from the American Council for Judaism Philanthropic Fund. Henry S. Moyer, of Scarsdale, N. Y., said in his semi-annual presidential report to the Fund's Board of Directors, that Jewish refugees and non-refugee immigrants in Europe, Israel, and the United States received grants totaling more than $50,000. "These were mainly Jewish refugees from Egypt and escapees from Communist countries in dire straits," said Mr. Moyer. "Funds for these refugees were administered by the International Rescue Committee." The plight of more than 100 Rumanian Jews who made desperate efforts to reach free countries in the West was especially critical, the Fund leader noted. "They were caught in a legal dilemma, in which they could not obtain refugee status for benefit by the United States Escapee Program, nor could they remain in Austrian refugee camps, or apply for work permits there. They had had to leave almost all their belongings in Rumania and were helplessly stranded in Vienna. Among them were rabbis and their families, doctors, and business people. Many not only survived Nazi concentration camps, but spent years in Communist slave labor camps and jails. Some frightened Rumanian families came to us with an order from the police directing them to leave Austria within forty-eight hours or face arrest," Mr. Moyer reported.

The Fund aided these refugees by: 1) obtaining one-year residence permits; 2) monthly grants for food and shelter; 3) loans without interest for refugees seeking to start their own business; 4) aiding in resettlement and rehabilitation in free countries. "In France," Mr. Moyer said, "187 Egyptian and Polish Jewish refugees, through our furniture grants, were finally able to occupy living quarters without having to sleep on floors. The sick received free medical treatment and work tools were provided to those needing them to earn a living."

"In Israel, an allocation was made to the Shazar Zedek Hospital, in Jerusalem, toward building a new out-patient department. Here in the United States, we helped in the initial resettlement difficulties of a number of refugees, and supported refugee scholars and artists in cooperation with the American Council for Emigres in the Professions."

The Philanthropic Fund, said Mr. Moyer, has pledged its maximum support to World Refugee Year which he called "the only hope for refugees whose problems cannot otherwise be solved." The Philanthropic Fund is a national charitable agency which provides assistance to distressed Jews and other special hardship cases.
